DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election without traverse of claims 39-59 in the reply filed on 4/26/07 is acknowledged.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 39-48 and 51-59 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Megerle (6,391,624). Megerle teaches a highly sensitive biological agent probe and method of using the probe. Figure 1 shows a schematic of the device. The device includes a preparation chamber (12), sensor cell (14) detection device (16), and processing unit. If the sample is to be an airborne sample, the device may include a cyclonic separator (column 5, line 64 – column 6, line 15). In use, a sample is processed to release any DNA (column 6, line 16 – column 7, line 22) and then exposed to the DNA array for hybridization. Once exposed to the array, DNA in the sample hybridizes with tags on the DNA array. Target samples are then identified on the array via output from the microprocessor (column 11, line 1-55).

Inventorship

4. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

6. Claims 49 and 50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Megerle (6,391,624) in view of Coyle et al. (7,062,982). Megerle teaches every element of claims 49 and 50 except for the use of electrical forces to separate the particles. Coyle teaches an apparatus for concentrating airborne particles. It includes a cyclonic separator having an electrostatic precipitator for concentrating the collected particles (Figure 8, column 5, lines 23-34). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the electrostatic separation from Coyle with the method of Megerle. Megerle teaches a cyclonic collection element to the device as well as processing the sample before exposing it to the DNA array. One would add the electrostatic precipitator to pre-concentrate the sample device as part of the collection and processing of the sample. This would concentrate the particles to be analyzed on the array.
